One Village at a Time.

Founded in 2010, Global Environmental Relief is an outgrowth of experience gained while performing transformational and urban development work in the developing world. This is a world where families suffer daily from environmental excesses over which they have no control. While there are many organizations which respond to disasters after they happen, our goal is to find ways to address environmental challenges before they become emergencies.

It is clear that human-induced and natural environmental impacts are disproportionately affecting the poor, the marginalized and the powerless around the world. Thus, our mission is to provide technical, educational, and financial assistance to these groups to help proactively find solutions that address their physical needs, lives and livelihoods in this context (for example, water purification, reforestation, environmental sustainability, and education). Where timely solutions are unavailable, environmental disaster assistance is also a mission-related activity.
